

Loxatl Brood

Points: 75 + unit cost

The Loxatl are an amphibious, quadruped xenos race that has gained a frightful reputation as mercenaries for the Blood Pact. These reptilians are slightly larger than a human, yet their dexterity is far beyond anything a guardsman could ever hope to attain. Away from their watery environment the Loxatl greatly benefit from their dewclaws that allow them to scale walls and even cling to ceilings. Out of the water their sensory skills are greatly dulled, so the brood relies largely on their highly evolved sense of taste and sensitivity to vibration. Their great speed and dexterity have also led to the development of a unique weapon, the flechette blaster. This weapon is worn attached to a torso-mounted harness, which also holds ammo packs and other supplies. It is believed that the Loxatl use a form of telepathy to fire this weapon, unleashing a shower of tiny, razor-sharp filaments capable of shredding armour and flesh alike. Though normally operating in small groups of three, it is not unheard of for larger Loxatl family broods to take to battle. When such a force gathers for war it is under the command presence of an older female Loxatl, a so-called matriarch. Attacking deep behind enemy lines these las-resistant amphibians strike fear into the hearts of whatever foe is unfortunate enough to face them. And with nothing but their characteristic milky-mint smell to reveal their presence most engagements are short and brutal. Most often ending in a victory for the Loxatl.
